

EDUARDO CARRILLO ZAMBRANO'S SUMMARY

Eduardo Carrillo Zambrano was born in Bucaramanga, Santander, Colombia. He obtained his bachelor degree in Engineering of Petroleum at the Universidad Industrial de Santander UIS, Colombia. He completed two Master Science degrees within the Universitat De Valencia in Spain and Universidad Industrial de Santander, Colombia investigating about Comparative Analysis of Web Integration Architecture / Databases (Universitat de Valencia) and Application Development for Mobile Internet, (UIS).

He has an excellent professional experience including Management Activities at Johannes Kepler de Linz University (Austria), Portsmouth University (England), Universitat De Valencia (Spain), Distributed Systems Group Dsg, Universidad Autónoma de Bucaramanga (Colombia). He finished his PhD at the Universitat De Valencia (Spain) in 2005, where he worked with Framework for ubiquitous and voice enabled web applications development: a transport information systems testbed.

Now, he is the Head of Engineering Research Center & Organizations at the Universidad Autónoma de Bucaramanga (Colombia), and the president of Colombian Computer Society.

Eduardo Carrillo Zambrano's research areas:

Ubiquitous learning and Computing, XML, XML Web Services, knowledge management, IT for web 2.0 marketing, Semantic Web and cloud computing.